Foreword

The Junior Year in France, under the auspices of Sweet Briar College, was inaugurated in January, 1948, to offer a comprehensive plan of foreign study to qualified men and women students, as a continuation of the Foreign Study Program formerly sponsored by the University of Delaware. Each year the program grows in significance.

During 1954-55, 83 students from 38 approved colleges and universities are pursuing their major academic interests at the University of Paris, studying under distinguished professors and guided by tutors who maintain the highest standards of scholarship and free inquiry. The students live with French families, and they are warmly received in France.

For our students to be welcomed into a European university to which for ten centuries students have thronged from all parts of the world is a deep and poignant experience which lends dignity to the educational sessions of the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France. We are especially grateful to President Jean Sarrailh of the University of Paris for his understanding and support of the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France.

A systematic evaluation study of the Junior Year in France is now in progress as a result of a grant of funds for this purpose from the Fund for the Advancement of Education established by the Ford Foundation. One of the major objectives of the study will be to determine the effectiveness of the Junior Year in France as demonstrated in the vocational and civic activities of the students who have already participated in the program.

At this time of great need for a better understanding between the peoples of the world, students gathered in friendly exchange between different countries can make important contributions toward the international vision of human fellowship. The eyes of men and women from every part of our shrunken globe look toward the United Nations, struggling to take the world forward on the difficult road to peace. We believe that our sponsorship of the Junior Year in France is more than ever timely, and that students and their parents will be eager to give it support.

Anne Pannell

President, Sweet Briar College

THE YEAR'S OBJECTIVE

The Junior Year in France offers students a full academic year at the University of Paris where, with French classmates, they may broaden and deepen their comprehension of the language, customs, history and culture of France, as well as specialize in such international subjects as art, government, history, international affairs, literature, philosophy or political science. French will be the exclusive language of communication in the class room, in the French families and among the students wherever they may meet.

In France the American student will become aware of the great emphasis placed on individual effort in the field of study. He will be expected to accept the responsibility of greater academic freedom, as well as greater social freedom. He will have to make his own way without the aid of the many extra-curricular and social organizations of the American campus. He will do well to adapt himself to the French university system, rather than to expect a great university to adapt itself to him. If he does so, he will attain an intellectual and social maturity of inestimable value to him in senior year and throughout life. Furthermore he will return with greater understanding of world problems and a better perspective of those of his own country.

ADMISSION

The Junior Year in France is open to responsible sophomores, both men and women, in regular standing in any four-year college or university recognized by the Junior Year in France. Applicants must be recommended by the chairman of their major department, the chairman of the French department, and the Dean of the college.

A candidate for admission must have had as preparation in French at least two years of pre-college French and two years of college French, or the equivalent, and must fulfill this requirement by June of sophomore year. It is desirable that he be studying French during the year in which he makes application and that he be taking a course in French literature. He must be a student of excellent character and seriousness of purpose, with a general academic average of at least C plus and an average of B in French. He must present a certificate of good health signed by his physician. The consent of parents or guardians and their approval of the financial arrangements are also required, unless the candidate has an independent income.

It is understood that every student, if accepted, agrees to the supervision and authority of the Professor-in-charge and the Assistant. All members of the group are expected to conform to the group regulations and conduct themselves as responsible representatives of their college and country.

Application for Admission

Application for admission to the Junior Year in France must be made on the official blanks provided for this purpose, obtainable from the Director at Sweet Briar College. The application must be submitted in duplicate through the Dean of the applicant's college as soon as possible after the end of the first semester, and not later than March 15. It should be accompanied by three (3) signed copies of the applicant's photograph, passport size, taken within the past year, and one (1) signed transcript of the applicant's grades through the first semester of sophomore year. A student who is accepted will be asked to send as early in June as possible two transcripts of his second semester grades. If these grades are unsatisfactory the student's withdrawal may be requested and the first payment refunded.

Scholarships

Only a few scholarships, of varying amounts, are available. These scholarships are awarded to students who demonstrate real financial need and whose records are excellent. Applicants for scholarship aid should request the special form prepared for this purpose, and should return the scholarship application to the Director of the Junior Year in France not later than March 1, together with the application for membership.

Graduate Students

A few graduate students will be admitted to the group if they wish to follow courses offered at the University of Paris. Many of the courses offered to members of the group are on an advanced level. A student may even apply at the end of the junior year if he obtains the approval of his college to be absent during the senior year.

PROGRAM OF STUDY

Preliminary Period (September 8-October 22)

The program of the six weeks preliminary period consists of intensive language study with native tutors who are selected by the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France.

The group will be divided into small sections according to the scores of a placement test. The nature of the work will vary somewhat according to the individual student's ability to read, write and speak French; but it will include practical training in grammar, composition, phonetics, and "Explication de textes," supplemented by lectures on various aspects of French culture and civilization.

With the coöperation of the Governor of the province, the Mayor of the city of Tours, the Institut International de Tours and the Institut de Touraine, the program of the preliminary period will again be set up in Tours, so rich in historical and literary memories and so hospitable to foreign students.

Absence from class is not advisable, particularly during the preliminary period. Vacation periods at the University of Paris are long and frequent enough to make requests to be excused from classes during the year unnecessary. Attendance at some courses is obligatory if credit is granted.

Program of Courses (November-June)

Students enrolled in the Junior Year in France will register in early November at various faculties of the University of Paris after consultation with the Professor-in-charge. The selection of courses will be determined by the extent of the student's preparation, his major interest, and so far as possible, by the requirements of his college in the United States. The University of Paris catalogue for 1954-55 will not appear before October and therefore the student cannot make a final selection in advance of that month. All course work is ended by June 30, 1955 and most of it earlier in the month.

Unlike the American university system, that of France is arranged in course sequences leading up to a general examination after two or more years. However, by courtesy of the President of the University of Paris and the directors of various divisions or affiliated institutes, the Professor-in-charge may recommend qualified members of the Sweet Briar College Junior Year in France group for one or more courses suited to their needs, in which a special examination will be given.

The Faculté des Lettres offers a very wide selection of courses in various fields which can be pursued with interest and profit by the foreign student. The schedule of lectures given by the professors at the Sorbonne is established primarily for French students who are preparing for the "licence" or the "agrégation." Each course runs for the most part for an entire year. Although the titles suggest that an entire period or century may be treated, this is not the case, since survey courses as such do not exist. The professor often chooses to study minutely one special field. For instance, a course in the 18th century may be a series of lectures, one hour a week, on Voltaire. The student is expected to have a good background knowledge of the entire period, and to do independent reading in preparation for the examination. This is his responsibility, not that of the professor giving the course.

At the Ecole du Louvre a number of courses on the study of various phases of art and on the general history of art are available. In each of the fields open to foreign students, the professor chooses a special limited subject on which the year's work is based. Classes are usually one hour weekly, supplemented by weekly "groupes de travail" under a tutor. Some courses are complemented by a series of visits to the museums.

At the Ecole Supérieure de Préparation des Professeurs de Français à l'Etranger, the program entitled Cours de Littérature française contemporaine, for which two or three members of the group qualify each year, deals with French literature from 1880 to the present and comprises a total of eight hours of lectures and four hours of practical exercises weekly. It has no counterpart anywhere in Paris.

The Institut d'Etudes Politiques, unique in its own field, has no equivalent elsewhere in the world. For French students the course is of two or three years duration, but by special arrangement competent members of the group may enter as "auditeurs libres." The regular instruction is very advanced and requires usually extra tutorial hours so that students may keep abreast of what is going on in class. There is also a special course, Cours de Certificat d'Etudes Politiques, recently organized for foreigners, which ends with an examination for the Certificate. Each year a great variety of courses in political science is offered. A limited number of bulletins with summaries of courses for 1954-55 is available to American professors who write to the Director of the Junior Year in France, Sweet Briar, Virginia.

A small number of students enroll each year at the Institut Catholique de Paris for special courses in philosophy and religion that do not exist in other schools.

The Institut Britannique has a twofold aim of familiarizing French students with the language and literature of England, and British students with the language and literature of France. The French Section, designed especially for English-speaking students, contains a number of programs at various levels, which may be pursued in whole or in part. The excellent "Littérature du XXe siècle" is less extensive than the course at the Ecole Supérieure mentioned above.

In this bulletin it is impossible to include all the courses open to Junior Year students. Those listed below comprise a majority of the courses taken by members of the last group. Credit depends on the number of lectures and also on the number of tutorial hours arranged by the Paris office of the Junior Year in France each year, as the system of credits characteristic of the American college or university does not exist in France.

Credit

Upon satisfactory completion of the year's work, Sweet Briar College will recommend to the American colleges and universities represented in the group thirty (30) or more semester hours of credit. Because of the variation in credit allowed for individual lessons in American colleges, credit for individual work in art and music studios is left to the decision of the appropriate department of the student's own college.

THE STUDENT IN FRANCE

Headquarters in Paris

The offices of the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France are located in the spacious building at 173 Boulevard Saint-Germain. Here on the fourth floor (troisième étage) the Junior Year in France has three offices and four classrooms and the privilege of using a large lecture hall. The library houses the collection of volumes belonging to the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France.

Living Quarters

Students will be lodged in French homes in both Tours and Paris in order that they may have the maximum opportunity to hear and speak French and to gain greater knowledge of French life and customs. The homes are chosen very carefully and a check is made each summer on the homes of the preceding year.

All arrangements for room and board are made for the year and changes cannot be made except for very good reasons.

Social Life

An attractive series of extracurricular activities, arranged by the Professor-in-charge and the Assistant, will include visits to museums and monuments and trips to points of historical and artistic interest in the vicinity of Tours and Paris.

A program of social events will also serve to bring members of the group into direct contact with French students and with outstanding French personalities. They are invited to official receptions in both Tours and Paris.

Transition, a student news sheet, is published by the group once a year.

Supervision

Students who are enrolled in the Junior Year in France will be under the supervision of the Professor-in-charge and the Assistant. Their supervision will end with the termination of a student's classes in June. The Professor-in-charge is the adviser on all academic matters. The Assistant will help him and will serve all students as an adviser on social matters. The students' scholastic progress will be followed carefully and periodic reports will be sent to the American colleges and universities from which they come.

The Professor-in-charge and the Assistant have absolute authority over all members of the group. They will have the right to require the withdrawal of any student whose conduct or academic standing warrants such a step.

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

Expenses

Like Sweet Briar College the Junior Year in France is a non-profit educational enterprise. Outside of the regular salaries and fees paid, no institution and no person can receive any pecuniary advantage from its operation.

Except for Item (1) below, the figures are not fixed, but are estimated as carefully as possible on the basis of present inflationary costs. It is therefore understood that parents will provide the additional amount necessary to cover actual expenditures as well as any deficit occasioned by factors and circumstances not now shown (e.g., an increase in cost of room and board or travel, or unforeseen personal expenses). After the accounts have been closed and audited at the end of the fiscal year, any unexpended sums in Items (2) and (3) will be refunded. In the case of students holding Junior Year in France scholarships, however, the room and board refund (up to the amount of the grant) will revert to the scholarship fund.
